Measures to protect complainants or whistleblowers and related persons

In order to protect the rights of complainants and informants who act in good faith, the Company shall conceal the name, address, or any information that can identify the complainant or the information provider, as well as keep the information of the complainant and the informant confidential. It is only limited to those responsible for investigating complaints to be able to access such information. The Audit Committee is responsible for protecting whistleblowers or complainants, witnesses, and persons who provide information in an investigation, so they do not suffer any trouble, harm, or unrighteousness arising from whistleblowing, complaints, witnessing or providing information. The complainant must submit a complaint directly to the Audit Committee. Persons receiving information have duties to maintain information, complaints, and documentary evidence of the complainant, which shall be kept confidential, and must not disclose the information to other persons who have no relevant duties, unless it is a disclosure in accordance with the duty required by law.
